Study of Taxes, Did You Say!

A citizen's committee has made a study of the income tax and made a report to congress. Only in the latter respect is this new. Millions of Americans have been studying it for years. And have found their study is no good unless accompanied by a check.

The committee favors changes. This makes it unanimous.

Taxes have been heaped on the American citizen until the only difference between a dollar and a snowflake is that the snowflake has crystals and lasts a little longer with favorable weather conditions.

Nobody writes success stories in the Horatio Alger mood any more. It is the same as confessing publicly that you are behind the eight ball. Life has become a succession of notary publics, printed forms, confusing paragraphs, dotted lines, galloping decimal points, double talk in fine print and the annual discovery you might have broken even if it had not been for the fact you did well financially.

Taxes have become as routine as rain. You are taxed for the alarm clock that wakes you up, taxed on the shaving soap and the razor blades, taxed on the bath fixtures, taxed on the towels, taxed on the pajamas which you hop out of to get into the heavily-taxed business suit, taxed on the breakfast dishes and taxed on the commutation ticket to the office.

For over 150 years our legislators and leaders imposed a tax with caution and apprehension. Holding a constituent's head under water was thought to be poor tactics. But that's all over. A politician of today thinks nothing of telling the voters he is endowing them with a happy future while going through their pants pockets.

Remember when the newsboy who rose to be a financial giant would boast about it? Look at him now The poor halibut wishes he had the paper route back. And not too many customers.

The 'Miss Hush' Matter

An automobile, an airplane, trips abroad and wagonloads of household equipment and clothing luxuries are being offered in another "guess who?" radio program in which a verse is the guide to the identity of a well-known American. This time it is a single woman. The verse runs:

Second for Santa Claus,
First for me;
Seven for wreath, thirteen for thee;
Bring me an auto, a book and a ball
And I'll say Merry Christmas
In spring, not in fall.

As a result more people now are being carried out of homes in straitjackets than at any time since the Clara Bow mystery voice. Everywhere you go you encounter men and women talking to themselves. Our house has gone nuts, too, with the missus tottering around muttering "Seven for wreath . . . two if by sea . . . thirteen for Notre Dame . . . one if by land . . . Yale 23, Santa Claus, 7. . . . It must be Isadora Duncan. . . . No, she's dead."

THE - Diary of a 49'er

FROM THE BOOK EDITED BY C. L. CANFIELD

MAY 11, 1851—Sure nough, Pard, Lawyer Dunn and Tom Buckner rode in to the camp before dark, driving a pack-mule loaded with all kinds of grub. It wasn't long before a good hot meal was prepared; there were willing cooks, and we assured the emigrants that their troubles were over. The poor girl was too sick to eat; in fact, was almost unconscious. Her sufferings were too much for Buckner and he swore he would have a doctor there by midnight, if he had to bind him hand and foot and bring him by main force. Buckner is a good fellow if he is a gambler and we knew he would keep his word. The girl's mother coaxed her to swallow a couple of spoonfuls of brandy—Frank Dunn luckily had brought a flask along—and that seemed to revive her. They all felt better after the meal and we built up a big camp fire and set around it listening to the story of their adventures and hardships until Tom ot bgack. Sure enough, he brought Dr. Hunt along with him, who after examining the girl said that it was a case of exhaustion and prostration for want of proper nourishment and that the brandy we had given her was exactly what she needed. Her father broke down completely and sobbed like a child when the doctor told him there was a chance for her recovery. We left them in good spirits, promising to send them up some more grub the next day. Pard advised them to stay where they were for two or three days, until their oxen recruited, and then to come into town and we would see that they got a fair start. This is a land of plenty, but the snowline and starvation i snot very far away. We all thought about the Donner party, and it was a coincidence that not half a mile from where these emigrants were camped was the grave of a young girl who was brought out from Starvation Camp by one of the rescuing parties that went to the relief of the Donners, and who died and was buried on the ridge. A pen of loge has been piled around it and it is known as the "Lost Grave."

MAY 25, 1851—On Thursday last a fellow rode up post haste to the claim and inquired if one of us was an officer, and when Pard answered that he was a deputy sheriff the man said he was coming in on the trail from Kanaka Creek and just after crossing the river found two men dead; both shot and evidently murdered that morning as they were not stiff yet. Pard left me to clean up while he went down the creek to summon a posse, and the man went on to town to inform the sheriff. By the time he got back with his men, five beside me, I was ready and we started for the place. When we got to Blue Tent we learned that a prty horseback—two Mexicans and a white man—had been seen before noon skirting the hill and making through the woods for the ridge. It was five o'clock in the afternoon before we got to where the men lay and there was everything to prove that they had been murdered. One was shot through the head and the other three times in the back. They were Americans, and as there were no arms or money on them there was no doubt they hd been robbed. The sheriff arrived about dusk, but there was nothing to do except set a watch to guard the bodies from the coyotes and send a man up the trail to find out who the murdered men were. Our party tramped back to the creek tired out, but we were lucky enough on the way to get some grub and coffee from the miners at Blue Tent.

WHY WIRING WILL START FIRES

BY BERT JOHNSON

Electric wiring has been falsely accused of starting fires a great many times, but there is frequently a possibility of rtuth in these charges.

One o fthe great cause of fire by wiring is fusing that is too heavy for the wire. In our community we have many homes and business buildings which were wired many years ago when lighting was the only use of electricity for domestic and minor commercial use.

Today many varieties of electrical apparatus are used in almost every home. This condition causes the voltage to push more amperes through th ewiring to supply these appliances in addition to lgihts.

Every home owner should inspect his wiring to see if he has fused his service to meet his wiring requirements.

For instance, No. 14 wire is not supposed to receive over 15 amps, and if you have 30 amp fuses in your box, there is a possibility of fire. Supposing one is operating an electrical appliance, and a direct short occurs. If we have No. 14 wire and a 30 amp fuse, the short circuit has to build up an electric back feed of 30 amps to blow the fuse.

This condition overloads the No. 14 wire and causes heat sufficient to burn the insulation and immediate fire.

tricte of these dangers, electlight the safest producer of for. heat if properly cared check advisable to frequently tures ig and fuses, keep fixfrom drood condition, refrain refrigerat electric irons, clean a year, motors at least once fixture cor string a piece of permanent use.

Historical Review

The following book is recommended by the Nevada County Historical Society's Library Committee for one's personal history book shelf.

"THE OVERLAND TRAIL"
by Jay Monaghan

Bobbs-Merrill Publishing Co.
Price $.75

Review by Henry Nash Smith for the New York Herald Tribue Weekly Book Review..

The development of a trail from the Missouri River to the Pacific cean is one of the classic subjects of American historiography. The story has a beginning in the discovery that a great river system draining the Northwest emptied into the sea through the Columbia. It moves with pace and color through the Lewis and Clark expedition, the annals of the Rocky Mountain fur trade in the 1830's and the conquest of the Pacific Ocean in the 1840's. It comes to a dramatic end with the completion of the transcontinental railway in 1869. As Mr. Monaghan remarks in the foreword to "The Overland Trail," the road to Oregon and California, "is remembered by most people as the pattern for all emigrant roads — the symbol of pioneer America."

The trail was a cross-country wagon track 3,000 miles long which threaded a half dozen mountain ranges. It represented an enormous investment in human labor and hardship and ont a few lives, but almost no capital. After Lewis and Clark spent a couple of thousand dollars of Federal money trying unsuccessfully to find a transcontinental route for waterborne commerce, the minute ecquaintance with the Northern Rockies and the Interior Basin on which the trail was eventually based was accumulated as a bey-product of fur-trapping ventures. A party of John Jacob Astor's employees on their way back from Astoria were the first white men through South Pass, focal point of the trail. The approach to South Pass up the Platte and the Sweetwater was developed by William Henry Ashley and Andrew Henry, of St. Louis. But what the mountain men contributed was the immaterial factor of knowledge, and the final result was more than anything else an intellectual construction. Even at the peak of its use durig the gold rush the trail depended on no engineering beyond the work of successive wagon trains in chopping dow trees that blocked their way up the canyons of mountain streams, rolling boulders to noe side and shoveling down approaches to gullies with steep sides.

Eventually shrewd entrepreneurs set up hapnazard ferries at the more dangerous crossings, such as that of the South Platte, and carried wagons over for $1.50 each, but this was a refinement and plenty of wagons got acoss by other means. The distinctive feature of the trail was that it could be used by frontier farmers with only their standard equipment of wagon, livestock, ax, skillet and rifle. Over much of the route human beings subsisted on game, principally buffalo. Horses, mules and oxen kept themselves alive by grazing along the way or could be fed on cottonwood bark, although of course with the heavy traffic of 1849 and later years the grass gave out and thousands of animals starved. The Great Migration was a triumph of living off the country. Anyone who feels ni need of freshioning up his admiration for the average man of the mid-nineteenth century need only drive out U. S. 30 and notice the passes and canyons through which the emigrants snaked their wagons, cattle, wives and children, with no more reserve supplies than could be got into the wagon at the outset.

Mr. Monaghan is a professional historian who has gone systematically through the scholarship devoted to the trail but he has written this beek for the general reader in a simple narrative style. Avoiding historical problems like the pressures behind westward expansion and the international crises it provoked, he tells his story as a series of individual adventures. Many people who set out into the Far West before the coming of the railroad realized they were embarking on an epic enterprise and set down what they saw in journals. The historian thus has a wide range of first-hand accounts from which to choose. In addition, he can draw upon such classic narratives as the Lewis and Clark Journals, Irving's "Astoria," Parkman's "Oregon Trail" and Mark Twain's "Roughing It," as welf as the devoted historical scholarship of the last half-century. Mr. Monaghan also makes telling use of his own observation of the landscapes in which the transactions of his narrative took place.

PROPERTY
IN NEVADA COUNTY

THE LAND OF PINES

TO THOSE WHO WANT A HOME OF YOUR OWN ON BANNER ROAD

The beginning of your own home at a price you can afford. Five acres, timbered in Oaks and Pines. Exceptionally level and the soil is so good. It makes you almost want to start that small orchard and garden right now. Along with the five acres of land are included enough cement bricks, and they are not the Basalt type, to build your own home. According to the plans the bricks will be sufficient to build a home 30 x 35, or an area equal to 1050 square feet of floor space. That are the dimensions of a large five-room home. There are enough small timber poles for your roofing requirements. There have been some very liveable homes built in Nevada County from this type of material, and they are substantial as well as attractive. There is electricity available. The complete sale price of this property, which includes five acres of level land, enough cement bricks to build your own home is $1,500. The owner will accept $500 down and monthly payments of $30. In case you wish to secure a bank loan, the owner will accept a second so you can secure that loan at the bank for your home. This property is located on Banner Road and is 5½ miles from Homer Knights Nason Paint Store, Grass Valley, or approximately the same distance from the National Hotel Building in Nevada City. If you want five acres of your own with cement bricks to build your own home, inquire now so you take your choice of the many attractive sites offered. Remember, the complete price is only $1,500. The owner will accept $500 down and $30 a month. In case you want a bank loan to finish the house, he will take a second.

Only MONITOR has this revolutionary new 3-Unit* HOME LAUNDRY

*Consisting of Monitor's patented Aerator Washer, Electric Steam Iron, and All-Metal Ironing Board (As featured in The Saturday Evening Post.)

THINK of it . . . a complete home laundry for less than you would expect to pay for washing or ironing equipment alone! Monitor has it . . . has engineered into it, too, features that are sensationally different.

For example, Monitor's unique Aerator Washer washes its full load in five minutes, or in one half to one third the time of ordinary washers. Moreover, thanks to an exclusive new invention, it washes cleaner and better—without harming even the most delicate fabrics.

Monitor's revolutionary Electric Steam Iron uses the live steam so necessary for the proper conditioning of delicate fabrics. It glides almost effortlessly, on a cushion of vapor. That's why no pressure is required; why you can actually iron sitting down. Operates also as a dry iron.

Monitor's All-Metal Ironing Board is adjustable to either a seated or standing height. It comes with permanently smooth ironing surface . . . including perforations for proper steam ironing. Easily folds away.

These, and other outstanding members of "The Most Distinguished Family of Home Appliances"—can be seen now, at your local Monitor headquarters.
